NATIONAL
UNIVERSITIES WEEK

UNIVERSITY OF VICTORIA

Volume 9, Number 20, September 23, 1983

While long line-ups like the one above did occur during the rush at the bookstore, manager Trudy Martin says things went fairly smoothly this year. "Because of our increased space this year and innovations like a check authorization space outside the store, things went very well," she said. "Of course, when you have 10,000 students all needing books at the same time, you will have crowds." Things have settled down this week, she adds.

Undergrad enrolment tops 10,000

There are now more than 10,000 undergraduate students enrolled at UVic.

The latest enrolment figures, presented to the Board of Governors (BOG) meeting Sept. 19, show an enrolment increase of 6.3 per cent from 1982-83. There are 6,851 full-time undergraduate students, up 3.9 per cent from 1982, while part-time enrolment has increased by 11.7 per cent, to 3,207 students.

Still to be counted are graduate students and off-campus registrations.

Administrative Registrar Gordon Smiley said he expects the increase in undergraduate enrolment to be less than six per cent when the final figures are tabulated on Dec. 1.

"As the financial aid picture unfolds this fall it may be a factor," he said. "As well, more students this year did not get all the courses they wanted and this may affect the drop-out rate."

He said off-campus registrations will be affected by cuts that had to be made in University Extension offerings because of reduced provincial funding for university programs in non-metropolitan areas of B.C.

In presenting the enrolment figures to the BOG, President Dr. Howard Petch noted that new admissions in first year are up only marginally, by 14 students.

"We have been endeavoring to hold first-year enrolment at the 1981-82 level when we had an enormous increase (14.5 per cent) in first year," he said. "That increase put a terrific strain on our resources."

While first-year enrolment is about the same as last year, first-time registrations at the second-year level are up by 21.1 per cent. Smiley explains that most of this increase can be accounted for by students transferring from B.C. colleges.

Petch said enrolment in Arts and Science rose by 5.9 per cent full-time and 12.9 per cent part-time with major growth in the humanities, particularly English, History, French and Philosophy.

"For example, while first-year enrolment is up only slightly, enrolment in one first-year English course is up 12 per cent."

Petch said the growth rate has been faster in part-time enrolment than in full-time enrolment for some years. "The situation has changed in part-time studies," he explained.

"These are not teachers or others with a full-time job taking one course a year," he said. "They are taking fewer than 12 units, but many are taking nine or 10 units. Some students find it necessary to work part-time and others go to classes in the summer and take fewer classes during the winter session. It's a continuous spectrum and most of the part-time students graduate."

Chairman forecasts hard times

Ian Stewart, newly re-elected chairman of UVic's Board of Governors (BOG), says universities in B.C. are in for "difficult times" with diminishing resources for education.

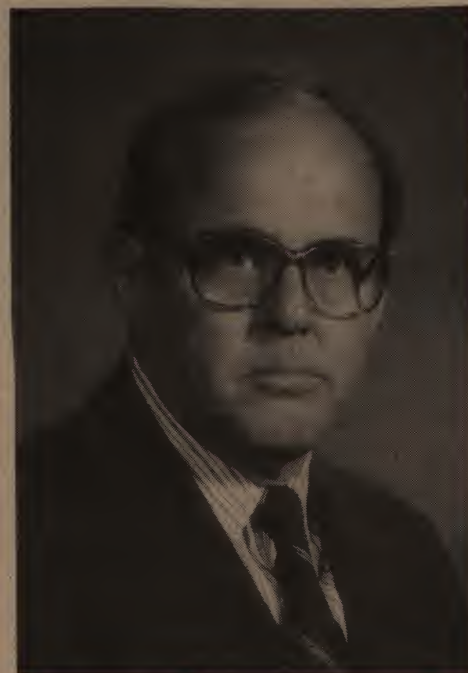

Stewart expressed concern that UVic, as a young university, may have some difficulty in getting "our share of public finances."

He pointed out that UVic does not have the large power base and army of alumni of UBC nor does it have the geographical location of UBC and SFU in the Vancouver-Lower Mainland area.

"We do have a head start on our sister institutions in that we have built a shrewd and able team of administrators, ably supported by faculty, staff and students. I'm quite amazed at the spirit and pulling together that I have seen here."

Stewart said UVic is somewhat isolated, on an island, and has attracted a large proportion of students from the non-metropolitan areas of B.C.

"We must establish closer links with these Interior communities and reinforce the friendships we have there," he said. "We must reach into these communities and join with them in presenting the case for UVic to the Universities Council of B.C. and the provincial government."

Stewart: re-elected BOG chairman

"That's the challenge of the year ahead—to enlist the support of Interior communities in a very real way."

At the meeting the BOG agreed to Stewart's request that the chairman of the BOG be elected annually at the September meeting and that the chairman choose candidates for vice-chairman, committee chairmen and committee members for a ratification vote by the BOG at the October meeting.

Stewart was re-elected BOG chairman by acclamation at the September meeting.

Presidents get together

While the atmosphere may be explosive when the three B.C. university presidents get together at the Universities Council level (see story this issue), all should be sweetness and light at a meeting of the three presidents Sept. 26 in Vancouver.

UVic President Dr. Howard Petch is master of ceremonies at a special joint installation ceremony for Dr. George Pedersen, newly appointed president of the University of British Columbia, and Dr. William Saywell, newly appointed president of Simon Fraser University.

The ceremony takes place at the Queen Elizabeth Theatre, beginning at 8 p.m.

Saywell is the former University of Toronto Vice-Provost while Pedersen held senior academic positions at both UVic and SFU before his appointment as UBC president earlier this year. Pedersen was dean of Education and vice-president, academic, at UVic before becoming president of SFU at the beginning of 1979.

Law grad chosen

Anthony Borzoni, a UVic graduate of the Faculty of Law, is the inaugural recipient of the Cambridge Scholarship of the Canadian Institute for Advanced Legal Studies.

The scholarship pays for tuition and college fees, travel to England and living and accommodation expenses in England. Borzoni will be accompanied by his wife and two children. The Canadian Institute for Advanced Legal Studies was formed several years ago with the objective of promoting the development of a greater understanding of the role of law in our society with emphasis on Anglo-Canadian jurisprudence.

Borzoni has also been awarded a Graduate Scholarship by The Law Foundation of British Columbia in the amount of $7,500. The Law Foundation has for several years awarded scholarships to encourage graduate work in law.

Borzoni will be undertaking his graduate studies at Emanuel College of Cambridge University where he will be enrolling in the Master of Philosophy degree program in Criminology. After completing the program at Cambridge, he plans to return to British Columbia in order to complete his term of articles which are required for admission to the Bar. Upon completing his articles, he plans to specialize in Criminal Law and says he may consider a teaching career in law either in Canada or elsewhere in the Commonwealth.

Committee chairman says timetable system is 'a mess'

"I knew it was a controversial issue, but I expected at least the courtesy of a debate," said Dr. M.J. Ashwood-Smith (Biology) after Senate received and filed without debate a lengthy report on the university timetable structure.

"I've had senators come up to me since the meeting and apologize for the way it was handled," said Ashwood-Smith, chairman of an ad hoc Senate committee which presented the report at the Sept. 14 meeting.

Ashwood-Smith's committee had made several recommendations designed to give students more flexibility and input in planning programs.

"The timetable system we have now is a mess," said Ashwood-Smith. "It's a result of tradition, evolution and faculty desires."

He said the committee realized that faculty members had some legitimate concerns about some of the committee's recommendations, "but the bottom line is that faculty flexibility in developing the timetable will have to decrease if student flexibility is to increase.

"We felt that students, as consumers at a university, should have some input into the timetable."

The committee recommended that departments and schools be required, as far as feasible, to outline a three-year course offerings plan, to inform students of the plan and to designate in the Calendar the courses that they expect to offer every year.

In the report to Senate, the committee said the main complaint comes from students who feel they are unable to pre-plan programs and courses. "The committee realizes that the recommendation has staffing and budgetary implications but feels that unless the university can move in the direction recommended, the university's clientele will not be served as well as it should."

The committee also recommended that the university strike a technical committee to investigate the possibility of introducing a computerized timetable system to meet both faculty and student demand.

Under the computerized system, tentative course offerings lists, including the names of instructors where possible, would be made available to students by early March of each year. The students would indicate what programs and courses they wanted for the next Winter Session. The student choices would be used along with data on room availability, faculty preferences and the previous year's schedule of classes to build a timetable.

Ashwood-Smith: calls for more student input

"Problems such as one set of students wanting two courses that were tentatively scheduled at the same time, would be obvious from the system's reports," stated the committee report.

"Departments could construct a timetable around faculty and student needs," said Ashwood-Smith after the Senate meeting.

"We're going to have to move to a computerized timetable eventually," he added. "The committee felt that Senate should have some control over the design of it."

He pointed out that at present no one knows the effect of timetable clashes.

"At least under a computerized timetable system we would know how many students want a particular course."

Ashwood-Smith said many departments and schools do not see the timetabling conflicts that occur frequently in programs for general arts degrees.

The committee also recommended that students having more than one examination a day have the option of requesting a rescheduling of the individual examination.

The committee said about 500 students are affected each examination period by having to write more than one exam a day.

This recommendation was rejected by the Faculty of Arts and Science. A committee in Arts and Science reported that there was "almost unanimous opposition to this proposal. Many departments argued that writing two examinations in a single day is not an undue hardship for students." The committee in Arts and Science also warned of difficulties in creating and marking separate exams of equal difficulty and the problems of security if the same exam was used.

Ashwood-Smith, while not a member of Senate, attended the Sept. 14 meeting at which the ad hoc committee's report was swiftly filed.

Dr. Bill Gordon (Mathematics) moved that the report be received and filed without debate, that the committee be discharged with thanks and that Senate proceed to the next item on the agenda.

Gordon argued that the committee had gone outside its terms of reference.

Senator Bruce Kilpatrick, former AMS Ombudsman, urged Senate to defeat Gordon's motion as did student senator Dominique Roelants van Baronaigien. "We shouldn't just throw this report in the garbage after all the work that has gone into it," said Roelants van Baronaigien.

Senate approved Gordon's motion by a 20-17 vote.

Ashwood-Smith said there was no reason that individual Senate members could not bring any of the committee's recommendations back to Senate for debate. "I've had enough of it, but I hope students will see that these recommendations, if carried out, would constitute a charter to give them more input at all levels."

Ringers

Original pieces by well-known artists Fenwick Lansdowne, Neil Dalrymple and Amy Storey are among works of art to be auctioned off at a benefit dinner and art auction Oct. 14 at the Faculty Club. The evening is presented by the Swan Lake Christmas Hill Nature Centre Society which is raising funds for the nature sanctuary's educational program. Tickets for the dinner and auction, at $40 a person or $60 a couple, must be ordered in advance from the natural sanctuary office on Swan Lake Road, telephone 479-0211. The art to be auctioned can be previewed on the evenings of Sept. 30 and Oct. 1 at the Newcombe Auditorium or at the Maltwood Art Museum and Gallery on campus on the afternoons of Oct. 13 and 14 until 4 p.m.

Convocation ceremonies are reflecting the rapid growth of student enrolment at UVic. Senate, at the Sept. 14 meeting, decided that Spring Convocation 1984 should be divided into four ceremonies over two days. Dr. Betty Kennedy (Mathematics), chairman of ceremonies and special events, explained that it would be necessary to have four ceremonies because of steadily increasing attendance at Convocation. "The committee believes that students should be able to bring at least three guests and in order to do this we must subdivide the graduating class into four ceremonies". For 1984 this means that two ceremonies will be held on Friday, June 1 and two on Saturday, June 2, for the Spring Convocation.

Student senator Dominique Roelants van Baronaigien has served a notice of motion requesting Senate to rescind a motion passed in February of 1983 calling for entrance requirements at UVic to include both a Grade 11 foreign language and a science for B.C. high school graduates beginning in September of 1986. At the Sept. 14 Senate meeting, Roelants van Baronaigien announced his intention to seek the continuation of current entrance requirements including a Grade 11 science or a foreign language. At the September meeting Senate approved a proposed change in the Calendar entry for 1986-87 calling for science and a foreign language. Senate decided on the foreign language requirement beginning in 1986 after a long debate at the February meeting.

Dr. Richard Powers (Political Science) was re-elected by acclamation as vice-chairman of the Senate at the Sept. 14 meeting. Powers, who has just completed a one-year term as vice-chairman, will chair Senate meetings in the absence of chairman Dr. Howard Petch, UVic President.

Chop from 12 to 3 student Senators proposed

By John Driscoll

A recommendation calling for a reduction in the number of students on Senate from 12 to three has been sent back to an ad hoc committee studying possible revisions to the University Act.

The recommendation which proposed reducing the number of senators from 53 to 33 took up a large portion of a long Senate debate Sept. 14 on committee recommendations for changes in the Act.

The ad hoc committee, chaired by Dr. I.D. Pal (Economics), recommended that the Senate be reduced in size "to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of its decision-making".

"The committee considers that the ratio for student representation as given in the Act is unnecessary because it does not share the view that there is a relationship between the effectiveness of student voice on Senate and the number of student Senate members."

Student senator Hendrik Zimmermann argued that the effectiveness of any group on Senate, including faculty, is not related to numbers.

Under the proposed revision, there would be 14 faculty members on the UVic Senate along with three students, two members of staff, two provincially-appointed senators, the seven deans, two members of Convocation, the chancellor, president, vice-president academic, librarian and the director of University Extension.

"Student representation will be reduced to tokenism if this change is made," said Dr. Brian Wharf, Dean of Human and Social Development.

Dr. Reg Mitchell (Chemistry) spoke in favor of the committee recommendation. "Student elections to Senate have been quite farcical and we have had to elect student senators right here at meetings because of lack of interest," he said. "Three students are completely adequate."

Senate did defeat a committee recommendation calling for the removal of a clause in the Act providing for student representation in the meetings and procedures of the faculties.

The committee called for a complete revamping of the structure of the Universities Council of B.C. (UCBC). Under the current Act, the council consists of 11 people appointed by the provincial government, with employees or students of universities ineligible to sit on the council.

UCBC allocates operating grants, approves new faculties and co-ordinates long-range planning for B.C. universities.

The committee recommended that the presidents of the three universities and a member of the Senate of each university sit on the council along with seven members appointed by the government.

This recommendation was referred back to the committee after President Dr. Howard Petch said it was impossible with the current environment for the three presidents to sit on UCBC.

"Unfortunately, the whole emphasis has been to put the universities in an incredible competition for resources," said Petch.

"When the presidents now meet with UCBC things get polarized very quickly. The presidents have been placed in a position where they cannot take a statesman-like approach.

"If the presidents were on UCBC they might blow the council up. It doesn't need to be that way, and the environment could change, but it is that way, now."

Petch said the big problem now is that too many UCBC members do not have a real understanding of universities.

Committee member Dr. Gerry Poulton (Chemistry) said the committee felt that UCBC is not living up to its stated aims but is a necessary buffer between the universities and the Ministry of Universities.

Dr. Anthony Burke (Physics) questioned the wisdom of university representation on UCBC. "If UCBC is seen solely as an agent of the universities it could put all the decision-making back into the hands of the Ministry."

The committee concluded that the University Act "has essentially withstood the test of the past nine years", but is in need of several amendments.

Senate approved several recommendations including that the Board of Governors appoint, with the approval of Senate, all senior administrators at universities, and that the president report annually on academic matters to a joint meeting of the faculties.

Petch said all recommendations approved by Senate would be forwarded immediately to the Ministry, since "there is some urgency in this.

"I have received questions from Ministry officials that can only lead me to conclude that the government is working on amendments to the University Act.

"It is absolutely mandatory for us to get our recommendations in as soon as possible."

Senate asked the ad hoc committee to report back to the October meeting on those recommendations referred back for further study.

McGeer attends UVic GIBLAD

About 300 people have been invited to a GIBLAD at UVic, Oct. 4.

According to Sonia Birch-Jones, UVic alumni co-ordinator, a GIBLAD is a Government - Industry - Business - Labor Appreciation Day. She has organized a special day on campus for leaders in these areas to sit in on classes, lunch with residence students and participate in a special seminar on the future of high technology in Canada.

They will be treated to a high-profile panel discussion on "High Technology—The Future—Illusion or Reality?"

Panel members include Dr. Patrick McGeer, Minister of Universities, Science and Communications; Peter Cornell, director of the Economic Council of Canada; Don Cruikshank, Vice-President, Corporate Communications, for Bell Canada and Katherine McGuire, national representative in the research and legislative department of the Canadian Labor Congress.

Dr. James Cutt, acting director of the School of Public Administration at UVic, is the moderator for the panel.

The panel discussion is scheduled for 2 p.m. in Room 159 of the Begbie Building.

The GIBLAD is a highlight of National Universities Week (NUW) activities at UVic. From Oct. 2 to 8, UVic is welcoming the community to a variety of activities including a theatrical performance of a trial, an old-fashioned sports day and special "taxpayer's luncheons".

Birch-Jones, co-ordinator of NUW at UVic, explains that events are designed to point out the essential role universities play in community, regional and national development.

"Our GIBLAD is a salute to government, industry, business and labor for the support they have given to universities."

She said the support extends beyond scholarships, bursaries and research funds. "They have supported the philosophy behind universities in our society and specific university projects. We want to show them where their support goes and ask for their continued support during these difficult financial times."

A special salute to National Universities Week, to be televised by the CBC, is a concert Oct. 7 in University Centre.

The Victoria Symphony, with music director and conductor Paul Freeman, will perform with the University of Victoria Chorus under conductor George Corwin.

Five of the brightest young musicians in B.C. will be featured during the concert which includes special arrangements of O Canada and God Save the Queen. Music by Saint-Saens, Kabalevsky, Poulenc, Bruch, Siebelius and Smetana will be performed along with Tchaikovsky's 1812 Overture, with chorus.

Tickets for the taping of the concert which begins at 7:30 p.m. are $5 for students and seniors and $8 for everyone else.

Films previewed

Faculty and staff have an opportunity Sept. 29 and 30 to preview newly released short educational films in the basement of the McPherson Library.

Joyce Jeffries, co-ordinator of the Film Centre in Audio-Visual and Television (AV&TV) Services, has arranged the one-time preview of 21 new films through the co-operation of major film distributors McGraw-Hill, Thomas Howe Associates and Visual Education Centre.

This is the third Film Showcase arranged by Jeffries this year.

Topics of films to be previewed this time include history (The Birth of Europe), science (Black Holes and Quasars), child development (Child's Play), decision-making (Decisions), dieting (Dieting: The Danger Point), sports (Hobbies Heroes), anti-war (In the Minds of Men), and computers (Welcome to the Future: Computers in the Classroom).

Six screening areas will be operating simultaneously at AV&TV between 1 and 6 p.m. and all films will be available free of charge for faculty and staff to view.

Nineteen stories from Russia

Nineteen people with 19 different stories" is how Dr. Nicholass Tyrras describes the outlooks of students who spent 24 days in Russia this summer learning the Russian language and experiencing Slavic culture.

The trip, the fifth organized for Russian language students by the UVic Slavonics Department, was again a success, says Tyrras who has travelled with the student groups to the Soviet Union for the past three years.

The importance of this exchange to enable students to learn the Russian language cannot be overstated, Tyrras emphasizes, explaining that there is no better way to absorb the language and culture of a foreign country than to live there for a period of time. For students of Russian, this can be more difficult to accomplish than for students of languages spoken in more accessible countries such as France, Italy, Spain and Germany.

The group from UVic stayed at Dyuny (the Dunes), 40 km outside of Leningrad, and were taught by teachers of Russian from the University of Leningrad, while living in residence and mingling with other students from Finland, West Germany and France. The trip is organized through the Russian Ministry of Tourism and students pay their own expenses, with the assistance of subsidies from the UVic

Alma Mater Society, UVic Extension and the Dean of Arts and Science.

It was a "marvellous" experience, says Scot Fraser, a first year student who wants to be able to communicate with people from the Soviet bloc in order to work in Europe in the field of pipeline engineering after completing his education. "My Russian is much better today than it was a month ago. I was quite happy about being able to overcome my block about speaking the language."

Jane Plater, who has completed a degree in Theatre at UVic and is now doing a diploma in Applied Linguistics, calls the trip "enlightening".

"You don't go to Russia to 'have a good time'. You experience Russia. I didn't go with preconceived notions, but in some ways I was surprised by the lack of amenities, and the lack of things we take for granted such as fruits, vegetables, or lawn mowers. They sell the kind of lettuce we throw out."

Daryl Spencer, who is entering second year at UVic and studying Russian and French, found that "people are very friendly on the streets. We were not made to feel unwelcome. More people should go over there and learn the language and meet people. They want peace too."

There is a high degree of "bureaucratic hindrance" which comes into play when trying to get approval for certain activities, says Tyrras, who had to petition for two weeks to get approval for a group of eight from the UVic group to travel to Moscow for a short trip. "But, once you get past the bureaucracy, the people as individuals are very helpful and all the details were satisfactorily arranged."

After his third consecutive trip, Tyrras said he still comes back "feeling crushed by the poverty of the country. I hesitate to say things are getting worse, but I don't see any improvement in food and dress."

Tyrras and the students interviewed said that nuclear disarmament is a universal concern among the people on the streets in Russia, and that many Russians they spoke to expressed the same fear of the North American military that is expressed here about the Soviets. They noted that cultural life is extremely important to the Russian people. "The theatres are full. The people appreciate culture, and events are inexpensive. The whole country is inculcated with a love for culture," said Plater.

Both full and part-time students can apply to the Slavonics Department to join the tour, said Tyrras, adding that "We know so little about life in the Soviet Union. It's important for people to learn more. They build sandcastles too!"

Four entering law earn scholarships

Law Foundation Entrance Scholarships worth $4,500 each have been awarded to four students entering the Faculty of Law at UVic this year.

The scholarships are renewable if the students obtain a first class standing.

The students are George Macauley and Janet Erasmus of Victoria, Ron Skolrood of Lethbridge, Alberta and James McCormick of Edmonton, Alberta.

The Law Foundation was created by Provincial legislation in 1969 to serve as a receiver of interest accruing in lawyers' mixed or general trust accounts maintained in financial institutions.

Recipients of scholarships were chosen by a selection committee consisting of Dean of Law Lyman R. Robinson, Associate Dean Terry J. Wuester, Administrative Assistant Garry Charlton and two members of the Law Foundation Board of Governors, David Angus and Pam Murray.

The balmy mid-September weather with temperatures well above the seasonal average has students seeking a place in the sun all over campus.

Volunteers needed

An opportunity is available for students to gain valuable learning experiences through volunteering.

The Victoria Volunteer Bureau is holding a Volunteer Fair Oct. 5 and 6 in University Centre. The fair has been organized to coincide with National Universities Week activities at UVic.

The fair will be in operation from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

"The Bureau has worked closely with the university in the past by locating placements for students seeking volunteer experience," says bureau executive director Alan Currie.

Currie said last year more than 300 potential volunteers were recruited through the Volunteer Fair on campus.

The Victoria Volunteer Bureau is located at 211-620 View Street, telephone 386-2269, and operates Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. More than 400 volunteer positions are listed with the bureau, representing the needs of more than 160 non-profit organizations.

Note

The next issue of the Ring will be distributed on campus Oct. 14. Look for the special President's Report in Ring boxes early in October. This 16-page report has been prepared under the editorship of Donna Danylchuk of Information Services and will be distributed widely in the community as well as on campus. It replaces Ring issues of Sept. 30 and Oct. 7.
